Provincial France Small Group Tour for Seniors

On this small group tour exploring provincial France, drift through Alsace, Burgundy, Provence and the stunning Jura Mountains on the byways and waterways of France. With a key focus on the region's history, our French foray commences in Alsatian wine country and concludes in Paris, after detouring through the south of France. Our escorted tours are designed specifically for mature-aged and senior travellers – whether travelling solo or with a companion – who prefer small group travel with an educational focus. These tours are fully escorted, accompanied by an Odyssey Program Leader and local guides.

Provincial France Small Group Tour Itinerary

Our dreamy tour of provincial France opens in Alsace to the country's north-east. Bordered by Switzerland to the south and Germany to the east, this region is unlike anywhere else in the world. Its vine-clad slopes and half-timbered villages are the stuff of fairy tales, and they are overlooked by the rolling Vosges Mountains. The Alsatian capital, Strasbourg, tells of a history of contention with Germany that has led to profound Germanic influences. Now the official seat of the European parliament, the city's medieval past is inscribed in the pastel-hued buildings that shimmer in its watery canals.

On our guided tours of the destinations, we visit Beaune, Dijon, Geneva, Lyon, Nice, and many more villages in between. We explore Burgundy, once a great medieval Duchy, but now better known for its quaint villages and slow-flowing canals. We cross briefly into Switzerland and check out the Jura Mountains, a region rarely visited by tourists. This range of wooded hills and undulating plateaux is known for its untapped wilderness.

We next explore southern France, exploring Provence and the Côte d'Azur, France's sun-drenched southeastern regions which have inspired artists such as Van Gogh, Cézanne and Picasso. In the summer months, holidaymakers flock to the beaches and chic resorts. However, in the relatively quiet spring we explore the remote mountain plateaux, perched villages and dramatic gorges, as well as the Mediterranean coastline. While in Provence we also learn about the region's Roman heritage and the cultural aspects of this stunning place.

We board the Train à Grande Vitesse (TGV), France's famous high-speed train, traversing the countryside en route to Paris where the tour concludes after a farewell dinner in the city of light, possibly dining alfresco on the cobblestone streets.
